

The Mission of the National Health Federation is two-fold:

(1) To protect the health rights and freedom of individuals, including their right to choose for themselves the foods they wish to eat, the means by which to prevent disease and promote optimal health, and the means by which to treat any disease state they may face; and
(2) To educate consumers, producers, health-care professionals, and government leaders about health options and the health freedom necessary to preserve all of those options.
